Sparks may fly over arena plan

- ▶ Downtown arena framework open to public comment on Oct. 25
- ▶ Dozens set to speak to city council at non-statutory meeting

SHELLEY

@METRONEWS.CA

Next week's public hearing for the downtown arena framework is expected to run into overtime, given the interest already shown by would-be speakers.

"I would expect it to go one day, maybe two," said Coun. Kerry Diotte of the hearing slated for 9:30 a.m. on Oct. 25. "I hope a lot of people do show up and I think it's important that they get out and speak regardless of how they feel."

Diotte, noting he is pro-arena but thinks a "better deal" needs to be scored, said negative feedback he gets from Edmontonians mainly surrounds the funding model. "We could have negotiated a whole lot harder," said Diotte. "We're going to own the rink but not get a cent of the revenue."

In the current arena funding model, the city would contribute $125 million, $125 million would come from a per-ticket surcharge, and the city would raise $125 million via a community revitalization levy (CRL).

Diotte said he expects the dissenters to include people upset with public money going to the deal and with questions about the remaining $100 million.

"The deal will not proceed if we don't have $100 million from the province. ... I haven't seen anything yet that we do," said Diotte. "Unless (Premier) Alison Redford shows up at the meeting with a $100-million cheque in her hand."

As of 3 p.m. yesterday, 30 people had registered to give their two cents' worth.

"I don't know how many went to the page and didn't register," said Taunya Proudlove, with the city clerk's office. "They're steady. We're expecting well over 100."

Interest rising

- ▶ Guy Almborg, systems analyst for the city, said by just after noon yesterday the information page on the arena hearing had seen 227 visits, but he expected that to double by today.
- ▶ Those interested in speaking at the Oct. 25 meeting can submit a form at edmonton.ca or email city.clerk@edmonton.ca.
- ▶ Comments can also be mailed to: Office of the City Clerk, 3rd Floor, City Hall, 1 Sir Winston Churchill Square, Edmonton, AB, T5J 2R7.
- ▶ Citizens can also designate someone to speak on their behalf, with a written permission form that includes both people's names, the item they will speaking on and signatures.

▶ Members of Occupy Edmonton, after surviving their own potential eviction from a private park downtown, delivered an "eviction notice" to the Alberta Environment building yesterday at the lunch hour.

MICHAEL THOMAS/CONTRIBUTED

Occupy Edmonton takes action

The Occupy Edmonton group said in a release an "eviction notice" was their way of highlighting the "too-cosy relationship the oil industry has with the provincial government."

Cab driver input sought in industry policy

Frustration between taxi brokers and the city's Vehicle for Hire Commission resulted in a council committee recommending drivers sit on an advisory board.

Garry Dziwenka, chief livery officer, said yesterday that staff will return with a report on implementation in January.

The key, he said, will be including driver input when creating policies.

Some industry concerns include waving a cab down from the curb, which can result in a $173 ticket, as well as the Edmonton International Airport contract, which will be re-examined in the spring.

An American celebrity hunter who makes big money selling videos of his waterfowl hunts must hand some cash to the courts for violations that include abusing birds after he shot them.

► Edmonton's school boards are looking at reallocating much of the province's restored education funding into the classroom.

Schools 'already spending' reinvestment funds

- City's Catholic schools at work in classrooms with beefed-up budget
- Public schools expect to start spending learning dollars next month

SHELLEY WILLIAMSON
@METRONEWS.CA

The Edmonton Catholic School District may see education funding reinvested by the premier in classrooms as early as next week.

"People are already spending the money," said board chairperson Debbie Engel, adding schools have been empowered to use money where it's needed most.

"The government gave us a lot of flexibility, so we have passed that on to the principals," Engel said.

Of its $5.49-million restored funding, $1 million will go to paring K-3 classrooms to 17 students and larger grades to 23.

Special-needs support will see $1 million more, and English Language Learner programs in Catholic schools will get almost $500,000.

"We will be able to reinstate newcomer programs," said Engel.

Alberta Initiative for School Improvement (AISI) programs will get the most — $3.04 million — reinvested, Engel said.

Edmonton's public schools are waiting to spend their restored education dollars, but board chair Dave Colburn said students will be the focus.

"I don't want to suggest that we would use that money only to hire teachers," he said. "But it will be inevitable that some class sizes will see reductions."

Board breakdown

- Board chair Dave Colburn said some of the Edmonton Public Schools' $13.1 million of the $107 million restored pie for education will go to staffing, including support workers.
- Most of the Edmonton Catholic School District's funding, $3.04 million, will fund programs through the Alberta Initiative for School Improvement, which covers learning teams and support services.

City of poetic champions

► Breath of Poetry takes first win for Alberta in poetry slam competition in Toronto ► Well-practised team praised for meaningful words and polished performances

They've been working hard for six months, creating lines like "This is not a poem, it's the next 180 beats of your heart."

And at the 2011 Canadian Festival of Spoken Word competition last week, Edmonton's poetry slam team "brought it home," boasts team member Ahmed Ali, who also won an award for the most quotable line at the competition: "I am Africa."

"Six hundred people in the audience saying that line with me — it was powerful," he said.

The festival saw Ali, Colin Matty, Liam Coady, Chris Krueger and team captain Mary Pinkoski recite original three-minute group and solo poems over several nights, judged on words, performance and audience reaction.

Pinkoski said her team emphasized the poetry more than the slam.

"We came prepared with really good poems the audience could connect with," she said. "Someone said all the teams brought the fire, but Edmonton killed it with water."

Pinkoski will represent Canada at an upcoming world poetry slam competition in Paris, but locals can hear more at open-mike nights, every Tuesday at Rouge Lounge on Jasper Avenue and 117 Street.

Event focuses on bride side

Who said you only get to wear your wedding dress once?

Thanks to a group of friends, a charity event this weekend gives local ladies a chance to dress the part of bride, without a hitch.

The idea came from an episode of Friends, said Bridal Bash organizer Melanie Kaban.

"Originally I thought I would just do it with my friends at my house, but we had so much interest we rented a hall last year," said Kaban.

Appetizers, dancing, prizes, glamour photos and a silent auction, with proceeds going to the Canadian Breast Cancer Foundation, are planned for the second-annual well-heeled soiree.

Those without white dresses can also dust off their prom or bridesmaid frock another turn.

"How many of us have dresses we wonder if we will ever get to wear again?" asked Kaban.

Prison guard choked, tied up

A convicted murderer doing time in a medium-security Alberta prison faces numerous charges that include kidnapping and assault after a guard escorting him on a day pass was choked and tied up.

Donald Fowler, 32, was sitting quietly at the wheel of a stolen van when he was arrested Tuesday near Olds in central Alberta.

The corrections officer was treated in hospital for minor injuries and bruises, but was badly shaken.

"She was very solemn," said Three Hills RCMP Sgt. Joe Sangster, who spoke to the guard shortly after she was rescued. "I think she realizes what happened, but I think the adrenaline was still pumping and I don't think it had set in, what happened to her."

Sangster said the guard was accompanying Fowler from Drumheller Institution in southern Alberta to visit his family in Buck Lake. She had accompanied him on similar visits in the past without incident.

On the way back, shortly before 6 p.m., Fowler allegedly pretended to be sick. Police say that when the guard pulled over to the side of the road, he overpowered her.

Top court: Web link is not libel

► Ex-Green party campaign manager had launched actions against Google, Myspace.com, Wikipedia

The Supreme Court of Canada has unanimously upheld a lower court's ruling that linking to a website containing libellous material does not in itself constitute libel.

The top court ruled yesterday against Wayne Crookes, a former Green party campaign manager who argued that posting links to sites with defamatory statements was the same as publishing the defamatory material.

The website in question did not reproduce any of the disputed material, nor did it make any comment on it.

In its ruling, the Supreme Court said there

Huge win

There were concerns that a decision siding with Wayne Crookes would have a chilling effect on the web.

"The ruling is a huge win for the Internet," said Michael Geist, a University of Ottawa law professor who holds the Canada research chair in Internet and e-commerce law.

is a difference between simply linking to a website and actively encouraging someone to follow a link to a website with defamatory content.

"Making reference to the existence and/or location of content by hyperlink or otherwise, without more, is not publication of that content," the court wrote in its decision.

"Only when a hyperlink presents content from the hyperlinked material in a way that actually repeats the defamatory content, should that content be considered to be 'published' by the hyperlinker.

"Such an approach promotes expression and respects the realities of the Internet, while creating little or no limitations to a plaintiff's ability to vindicate his or her reputation."

Frantic big-game hunt after wild animals freed

Sheriff's deputies shot nearly 50 wild animals — including 18 rare Bengal tigers and 17 lions — in an astonishing big-game hunt yesterday.

It happened after Ohio game park owner Terry Thompson threw open their cages and shot himself to death in what may have been a last act of spite against neighbours and police.

As homeowners nervously hid indoors, officers armed with high-powered rifles and shoot-to-kill orders fanned out through fields and woods to hunt down about 56 animals.

After an all-night hunt, 48 animals were killed.

Gadhafi still a worry in hiding

► He's plotting a separate state, Libyan PM warns

The looming menace of Moammar Gadhafi hovered over last-push military advances by Libyan revolutionary forces yesterday.

The fighters battled building by building against the final pocket of resistance in the fugitive leader's hometown, Sirte.

and destabilize the new Libyan regime.

The report underscored fears that the inability to catch Gadhafi — who escaped with two of his sons after revolutionary forces swept into Tripoli in late August — would allow him and his supporters to wage an insurgency.

Yesterday, Wissam bin Hmade, the commander of one of the revolutionary brigades, said they had Gadhafi supporters corralled in a 700-square-metre residential area of Sirte, but were still facing heavy sniper fire.

Don't cut veterans' benefits: Watchdog

Justifying spending cuts on the basis of a dwindling corps of veterans makes no sense because their numbers are actually on the rise, the watchdog for veterans said yesterday.

Veterans Affairs is planning to shave $226 million off its budget over the next two years because, it says, the number of veterans from the Second World War and Korean War is dropping.

But those numbers aren't falling as fast as projected, veterans' ombudsman Guy Parent told a Senate committee.

And the number of veterans from current conflicts and modern military service is growing. He put the potential client population for the department at 700,000.

Anger rises over attack

Woman's family waits for justice

► Winnipeg store owner no longer faces charge of killing shoplifter

In the two years since Geraldine Beardy was killed after stealing a $1.89 can of lunch meat from a convenience store, her family has waited for someone to be held responsible.

That hope now appears dashed. The Crown has stayed a manslaughter charge against the shopkeeper accused of assaulting her.

"For any group to come in and say that it's OK to beat an aboriginal woman over the head over a can of Klik is not OK," David Harper said yesterday.

Harper is a distant relative of Beardy — she was the daughter of a cousin. Harper is also the grand chief of the Manitoba Keewatinowik Okimakanak, which represents 30 First Nations across northern Manitoba.

Beardy died in September 2009 from injuries she received outside a convenience store in a tough Win-ipeg neighbourhood.

Police said Beardy was hit in the upper body as she left the store. She died five days later in hospital. They charged the store owner, Kwang Soo Kim, with manslaughter.

Kim's preliminary hearing was to start yesterday, but the Crown announced it had to stay the charge because a key witness had fled the country to avoid charges of his own.

This is exactly why it isn't OK for police to investigate police.

There was never any doubt what the conclusion was going to be in this case. There is also no question that there are NO circumstances short of a loaded gun in plain sight that would make it acceptable for two 200-pound police officers to have to Taser an 11-year-old kid.

Skydiving is considered a sport. Those who try it are considered daredevils, people who grab life by the collar and people who want to try new experiences.

Although community members' complaints of noise and fumes are understandable, it has now become a part of the culture of the area and it helps the economy with about 1,000 flights taking place each week.

Transition into comedy

► Edmonton's comedy festival underway ► Runs through the weekend at venues around city

BACKSTAGE PASS

JENNIFER LARAWAY
METRO EDMONTON

It's hard to believe that this is the first year of the Edmonton Comedy Festival.

In a city renowned for its festivals, you would think this event would be an institution by now, but for CTV's Graham Neil, it ended up being a huge untapped opportunity to introduce comedy to the city's festival line-up.

"I had a hard time believing this wasn't already done here," he says.

Despite being the veteran entertainment reporter for the station, Neil's transition into stand-up comedy wasn't exactly smooth.

It started with a seemingly innocent conversation with the hilarious Andrew Grose.

Neil just wanted a few tips and jokes to liven up his emcee gigs.

The next thing Neil knew, Grose's agent was calling to book him as the opener for an upcoming show.

"I don't do stand up," Neil recalls saying.

The agent coolly responded: "Andrew said you would say that."

All Neil had to do was fill 20 minutes before Grose took the stage.

In front of the crowd, he threw out all his aces. "Who wants Andrew?" he asked.

A quick exchange between the two backstage revealed the rookie Neil had actually only been out there for five minutes.

But, it was through that experience that Neil laughs now and says he knows he can get through anything on stage.

Perhaps most articulate of that is the commemoration show he did in memory of his brother who passed away from cancer just a few short years ago.

"He loved comedy and improv," Neil remembers affectionately.

So, Neil booked out Festival Place in Sherwood Park and the rest is history.

Not only did the show sell out and the acts got a standing ovation, but Edmonton Comedy Festival was born.

"After the show, a bunch of the guys were saying where they were headed next. There was a festival here and one there, and I thought Edmonton should have one too," says Neil.

Now it does.

The inaugural festival runs through this weekend at various locations around the city with tickets ranging from $12.50 - $40.

McBride gets makeover

► Country star switches label, tackles writing her own songs

Martina McBride was looking for that spark you get when you know you've discovered your true match. The country music star found it in Scott Borchetta and his Big Machine Label Group.

McBride's new album, Eleven, is her first for Republic Nashville, ending a two-decade association with RCA that included 18 million in album sales. But at 45, she finds the switch invigorating, and it has pushed her in directions she never really considered before.

Those days with RCA, she says, were good ones and the split was amicable.

"But it's also good after that long being in one place, to be able to transition to a place that has people that are just super, super excited about you," McBride said. "Sometimes in a long relationship, there comes a time when you just need to shake it up a little bit, and this feels like the first days when I was at RCA. Everything feels brand new again, and that's really a great thing, especially this far into a career."

Borchetta was very interested when he learned McBride wanted to talk about joining his group, home to other top stars like Taylor Swift, Reba McEntire and Rascal Flatts. And why not? She's one of country's veterans and remains one of its most lauded singers. She's up for female vocalist of the year next month at the Country Music Association Awards again, seeking a record fifth win in the category.

The label head thought there was more to McBride than the public generally sees, though. He encouraged her to write more songs for Eleven than she had on any of her previous 10 albums, and he also thought she should get out of town while recording.

McBride, who also hired new management and brought in new co-producer Byron Gallimore during this period, found the label's support liberating. It reinforced her growing confidence to tackle intimidating things like songwriting.

She co-wrote six of the 11 tracks. There was the lead single Teenage Daughters that arose from a disagreement with her oldest daughter. Long Distance Lullaby, about being away from home, also grew out of an idea about three daughters. And then there's Always Be This Way, loosely inspired by Train's Hey, Soul Sister and Jason Mraz's I'm Yours, which she wrote because she "just wanted to write something fun. I don't think I've ever made a record that had so much of my attention, especially since I had children," McBride said.

MARTINA MCBRIDE ON MOVING TO A NEW LABEL

Idol runner-up debuts album

► Lauren Alaina to 'make it or break it' with record released last week

Lauren Alaina is growing up quickly.

The 16-year-old American Idol runner-up has spent the past four months since the show's season finale performing in arenas across the country, doing interviews, music video and photo shoots, and recording her debut album, Wildflower, released last week.

The former high school cheerleader is hoping the effort will help solidify her in the country music world, because she realizes the stakes are high.

"I feel like this first album is kind of make-it-or-break-it for me, because I just got off national television. So people know who I am, but they don't know who I am as an artist," said Lauren in a recent interview. "I just feel like this album is my way of kind of putting myself out there and showing them exactly who I am."

Billboard's associate director of charts, Keith Caulfield, believes Lauren is off to a good start. Her first single, Like My Mother Does, is in the top 40.

"Even though she has Idol as this great platform to launch her, she's still a developing artist. You usually don't see Idol winners with their first single on the country charts fly to No. 1," he said.

"I think both her and (winner) Scotty (McCreery) are both in a really good position right now, because they're both young and they're both singing country music," he added, noting that the success of Taylor Swift has opened doors for young performers in the genre.

The 12 songs Lauren chose for Wildflower reveal experiences she's gone through or stories she relates to on a personal level. She co-wrote one track, called Funny Thing About Love, with Nashville songwriting talents Luke Laird and Brett James.

Lauren cut a song Carrie Underwood co-wrote, called Eighteen Inches. As a former American Idol winner, Underwood has provided meaningful support to Lauren. The two exchanged phone numbers, and Lauren asks her for advice when she gets upset. Recently, the Georgia native was feeling particularly homesick and reached out to Underwood.

"I just said, 'How do you deal with being away from your family for so long and just being gone all the time?' And she said, 'You have to think about all the positive stuff that's going on, because you have so much going for you right now. Your family will always be there.' Just hearing that from her, knowing that she had been through what I'm going through, just made me feel 10 times better," said Lauren.

Boob, James boob

► Rowan Atkinson reprises role as bumbling MI5 agent Johnny English

Rowan Atkinson, the venerable British comic actor, is known as much for his bumbling, near-silent Mr. Bean as he is for the witheringly sarcastic Black Adder. He returns to cinemas this year with another of his characters, the blundering, very un-Bond-like British spy Johnny English. Bolstered by a surprising second life on DVD for the first film as well as Daniel Craig's revitalization of the franchise it mocks, Atkinson is hoping his spy has staying power. And if overseas box office receipts are any indication, it does.

The film has already had some impressive success around the world.

Yes, thank you. When you hear you're the No. 1 movie in Malaysia and Hong Kong and Indonesia and all these other places you think, Well that's curious. You know, these cultures about which I know absolutely nothing. Isn't it interesting that they can latch onto something like Johnny English Reborn and embrace it with as much enthusiasm as a British person would? Or Russia. I went to Moscow for a premiere there. That was fascinating — partly in fact from watching myself dubbed into Russian. I thought I sounded slightly effeminate, but maybe that's how they see the British. It's probably some kind of Russian subtext. "Make sure the Brit looks a bit effete."

► Rowan Atkinson likens — but just a bit — Johnny English to the sillier James Bond movies from a decade ago.

Given the success of Mr. Bean and Johnny English, do you find people expect you to be a bit more dimwitted in real life?

Dimwitted? I'm not aware of that (laughs). Maybe I disappoint them — either by not being dimwitted enough or being more dimwitted than they thought I was going to be. Sometimes you get a sense of expectation of comedy, of a comic persona. When they discover that you're not Mr. Bean or anything like him, or even quite different — I hope — from Johnny English, as long as you can be polite and engaging, they might excuse you.

Where did the idea of revisiting Johnny English come from?

When the first Johnny English movie came out, people thought it was a bit cheap and cheerful. A "yeah, OK, three good jokes but then what?" sort of thing. And then it rather bizarrely established this reputation as a kind of DVD movie that children in particular can watch over and over and over again. The second re-exploitation, as they say; the TV screenings and the DVD sales. And that's where Johnny English did surprisingly well. And I guess that was a lot of the justification for making a sequel, from a commer-

Getting chaired

One of the biggest laughs in Johnny English Reborn is also one of the simplest. During a tense briefing with the prime minister, Atkinson fails to control the raising and lowering of his office chair.

► "There are a number of things at play there," Atkinson says. "One is the simple contrast, really, between a very serious meeting between the prime minister and his intelligence advisors — including Johnny English — and the ludicrous ineptitude of someone who's not controlling their pneumatic chair. And yet no one seems to stop the meeting and say, 'Would you stop playing with that chair!'" cial point of view.

And Bond has been having a resurgence.

Yes, exactly. What's good, actually, about the Daniel Craig thing is not only is he good in the part but because they decided — I'm sure, quite rightly — to move it into a more serious vein, it kind of opened up the field a bit for us. Johnny English Reborn is probably a little more — although only a little — like a James Bond movie of 10 or 15 years ago, when you had more fun with it and more silly jokes.

Monster director takes on Thor 2

Hollywood has signed up its first female director for a major superhero movie.

Marvel Studios announced Thursday that Patty Jenkins will direct Thor 2, the sequel to last summer's hit that is due in theatres Nov. 15, 2013.

Jenkins is best-known for writing and directing 2003's Monster, which earned Charlize Theron the best-actress Academy Award. Her credits also include episodes of Entourage and Arrested Development.

Chris Hemsworth will reprise his title role in Thor 2 as the Norse god of thunder, with co-stars Natalie Portman and Tom Hiddleston also returning.

The first Thor, directed by Kenneth Branagh, took in $448 million worldwide.

► Thor 2 will be the first major superhero movie to be directed by a woman.

Another female filmmaker, Lexi Alexander, made the lower-budgeted Marvel movie The Punisher: War Zone in 2008. But Jenkins is the first woman to direct a blockbuster superhero franchise.

► Bail set at $100,000

Lindsay Lohan has been taken away in handcuffs after a judge found her in violation of her probation.

Superior Court Judge Stephanie Sautner revoked Lohan's probation Wednesday after the actress encountered problems during her community service assignment at a women's shelter. Bail has been set at $100,000.

Sautner said Lohan would be entitled to a hearing before being sentenced to jail over the violation.

Lohan has started serving hours with the American Red Cross, but Sautner said that would not count toward her probation because it was not part of her sentence.

It's the latest legal problem for the 25-year-old Lohan, who remains on probation for a 2007 drunken driving case and a misdemeanor theft case this year. ● METRO

Jennifer Aniston was honoured at Elle magazine's 18th annual Women in Hollywood Tribute, and her presenter, longtime pal Reese Witherspoon, couldn't contain her enthusiasm for the former Friends star, according to Us Weekly.

"On one hand, she is this gorgeous breathtaking beauty that men lose their thought process and their speech patterns [over] — I've actually seen this, it's incredible when they see her — and, on the other hand, she is a woman who lets you in," Witherspoon gushed.

"There's not that many people actually that have this incredible combination. You just want to get your nails done with her, and you want to make out with her at the same time ... at least I do." ● METRO

Materials account for much of the cost, given that all the bags and wallets have leather exteriors and interiors. "With a lot of 'luxury' brands, you open up a bag and it's empty. It's fabric-lined with a zip pocket," says Truex.

The pair's designs were sent to craftsmen in Italy where the entire collection was made.

The star item has been this Tiffany Reversible Tote — a soft suede and metallic leather bag with palladium-plated solid brass hardware and a detachable zipper pouch.

All seams are double-stitched

Corners are riveted for protection

The designers travelled extensively to derive inspiration for their collection's rich saturated colours.

Bag mistake

What do the designers deem the biggest mistake a woman can make when choosing a purse?

► "A mistake is wearing a huge tote when you're wearing a formal dress at a wedding," adds Truex. "It's like, come on! The bag is entering the room before you are."

The style bomb

► Rev your personal style up a notch with this season's trendiest trend — the bomber jacket

RICHARD PECKETT

METRO WORLD NEWS IN LONDON

The bomber. It's an aggressive name that's probably got you picturing alpha male types like fighter pilots, punks or most likely Ryan Gosling in the high-octane thriller Drive.

The best thing — and this is rare in our metrosexual world — is that this jacket is for blokes, as in men who don't necessarily moisturize or know that Chanel isn't pronounced "channel."

Yes, the belching man's man is back. And leading the latest fashion sting is Gosling wearing a scorpion-embroidered bomber, in a souped-up getaway car with a hot girl by his side.

KARL LOHNES

METRONEWS.CA

It's hard to find time to take on decorating projects at this time of the year, so I've compiled three simple decorating touches that you can do on a budget and in less than an afternoon.

Darker days, darker doors

Impress guests with some drama when they come through the front door by painting your front door a deep, luxurious colour.

The trend of a dark pronounced exterior door is coming back in style as dark colours add a sense of sophistication and importance to the front entry.

Choose a dark colour that is 'almost black' in its tone; dark purples, greens and navy blue top my list, and if by standing at the road it looks almost black, then you have the right tone!

Choose a high-gloss paint finish to add not only durability, but a glamorous sheen to the door.

And while you are painting, why not wrap the colour around to the inside of the door?

Adding that dark impact will do wonders to wake up your front foyer.

Colour coding

Looking for an easy way to choose the right paint colour for the front door?

Look at the colour of the body of the house and choose the opposite on the colour wheel.

For instance, if you have yellow-ish brick or siding then choose a purple colour; if you have orange brick choose a blue or green colour; if you have greenish siding then choose a burgundy-red colour.

Opposites do attract!

Bedroom highs

SCOTCH BLUE BRANDS

Is the bedroom looking a little bare without a headboard?

Well, with a bit of paint, edging tape (try 3M's EdgeLock blue Painter's Tape — it is new on the market and gives a crisp, clean edge to your paint job) and a level, you can create a faux headboard, which will add a focal point to your room.

For good proportions, measure the faux headboard six inches wider than your bed and at a height of around 52 inches (standard size).

To make the painted headboard blend into the room, choose a paint colour similar to the colour of your bedskirt or bed base.

When the paint is dry, lean some large pillows across the top of your mattress and you'll add a luxurious layered look to your bedroom.

CONTRIBUTED

► No headboard? No problem. Just pull out a brush and paint one on the wall.

CONTRIBUTED

► Create drama by painting the inside and outside of your door a nice dark colour.

BENJAMIN MOORE PAINTS

► Benjamin Moore's Kalamata AF-630 is fall's hottest front door colour.

Let your furniture 'slip into something more comfortable'

Slipcovering your furniture with store bought or custom tailored covers is a great way to change up the look of your furniture seasonally, hide old outdated pieces or protect valuable furniture from fading, wear and tear.

Store bought slipcovers range from $35 to 200 and although do not offer a tailored fit, can give a clean, fresh look to worn or outdated furnishings.

The look will be casual and they are recommended for utility over high fashion.

The labour for making custom made slipcovers can cost from $50 to cover a dining chair and up to $600 for a sofa, plus the fabric you choose.

It generally takes one to four weeks to create a couture cover for your well-loved furniture.

Keeping warm this winter

► Curling up with blankets and cups of cocoa is lovely – but not when it's necessary for indoor survival ► Here's a few tips for winterizing your home

DIY IDEAS

By following simple fall maintenance tips, you can save energy and stay warm this winter.

In every episode of 10 Grand in Your Hand host John DeSilvia shows homeowners how to cut up to $10,000 from their renovation and remodeling budgets by offering advice on new technologies and how-to information for doing it yourself.

Windows

Check for drafts by holding a lit candle near the seams of a closed window.

If the flame bends, there's a draft.

Check the exterior caulk for gaps and cracks that may need repair.

Remove all of the old caulking with caulk softener.

Polyurethane caulk works best for small and large gaps.

After thoroughly cleaning the surface, use the new caulk and run a wet finger overtop for a smooth finish.

After drying for 12-15 hours, your windows are ready for winter.

Fireplace

Wood-burning fireplaces should be cleaned and inspected before winter falls.

This will prevent chimney fires and carbon monoxide poisoning.

Attic

Make sure the insulation in your attic is installed properly.

The vapour barrier should be facing down toward the living space, otherwise it will trap moisture.

Cut small holes along the vapour barrier to allow the moisture to escape.

Furnace

Always clean and replace filters in your furnace or heating system.

Have your gas heater or furnace inspected and serviced to avoid carbon monoxide poisoning.

Carbon monoxide and smoke detectors

Every fall, check your car-

Keep a lid on it

Inspect your roof for wear and tear.

► Shingles that are curling, buckling or crackling need to be replaced.

► Flashing: Be sure to check the seams around skylights, pipes and chimneys.

► Keep the heat in: If there are any leaks or gaps, heavy snow and ice will find its way in — along with the cold.

Carbon monoxide detectors and smoke alarm and install fresh batteries.

A smoke alarm can save lives in a house fire.

► Licensed contractor John DeSilvia hosts 10 Grand in Your Hand.

Carbon monoxide is an invisible and odourless byproduct of burning oil or natural gas — the detector will sound if these levels get too high.

“Check for drafts by holding a lit candle near the seams of a closed window. If the flame bends, there's a draft.”

Wild rice gives risotto new texture

DINNER EXPRESS

EMILY RICHARDS
FOOD@METRONEWS.CA

Bursting with rich robust flavours of brown mushrooms and pecorino romano cheese, this risotto uses wild rice for a slightly different texture and flavour.

Preparation:

1 In saucepan, heat stock to a simmer. Then in a separate large saucepan, heat 15 ml (1 tbsp) of the butter and oil on high and cook until melted and bubbly. Add onion and cook until softened, 3 to 5 minutes. Add garlic and stir.

2 Add rice and stir to coat thoroughly. Add a pinch each of the salt and pepper. Pour wine over rice and cook for 2 minutes until some of the alcohol boils off.

3 Add 2 ladlefuls of hot stock to rice and stir well. Stir frequently as stock starts to boil off and rice begins to get soft. Add mushrooms.

4 Keep adding stock by ladleful, stirring every 2 minutes until all stock is absorbed and the rice is thoroughly cooked through. This will take about 30 to 40 minutes with brown rice. If you run out of stock, add a bit of hot water.

5 Add remaining butter, cheese and parsley; stir to combine. Divide equally among 4 plates. EMILY RICHARDS IS A PROFESSIONAL HOME ECONOMIST, COOKBOOK AUTHOR AND A TV CELEBRITY CHEF. FOR MORE, VISIT EMILYRICHARDSCOOKS.CA/

Upgrade scrambled eggs into a frittata

► This easy meal starts with eggs, then mixes in other ingredients such as mushrooms, tomatoes and more

It's a complete meal. It's easy. It's fast. It's versatile.

A frittata is simply one of the best choices when a weeknight meal needs to get on the table fast.

Think of frittatas as scrambled eggs with other ingredients mixed in. And instead of cooking it entirely on the stovetop, it gets finished under the broiler. This creates a delicious lightly browned top, especially if you toss a bit of cheese on it before popping it in the oven.

In this recipe, oil-packed sun-dried tomatoes are a better choice than fresh, as they have little water. Don't worry about the oil clinging to the tomatoes; it serves as your cooking oil.

Preparation:

1 In a bowl, whisk eggs, milk and thyme. Add salt, pepper; set aside.

2 Heat sun dried tomato oil in oven-safe non-stick skillet over medium-high heat. Add onions, mushrooms, sun dried tomatoes and garlic. Sauté until onions are soft, about 5 minutes. Add chard and cook until just wilted.

3 Spread vegetables in an even layer over bottom of pan. Pour egg mix over them, then cook, without stirring, for 4 minutes, or until bottom has set. Sprinkle cheese over top of frittata.

4 Transfer pan to middle rack of the oven and broil until frittata is puffed, lightly browned and firm at the centre, 2 to 3 minutes.

5 Remove pan from oven and cool slightly before slicing.

Whitney alone can't carry Oilers' back end

THE HOCKEY NEWS

RYAN KENNEDY
EDMONTON@METRONEWS.CA

Ryan Whitney didn't record a point in his season debut against Calgary Monday night, but his return is great news for the young Oilers.

There's no doubt Edmonton has amassed a dazzling array of skill up front, particularly with Ryan Nugent-Hopkins' scintillating start, but if this core is going anywhere in the next few years, it's on the back end where the team must improve.

Whitney, at 28, is in the sweet spot of his career and has the size and talent to be Edmonton's legitimate No. 1 defenceman. But there's a wide gulf after him.

Ladislav Smid is a serviceable blue-liner who's not afraid to play rough and Tom Gilbert also brings size and power-play acumen, but otherwise the Oilers have taken a lot of chances.

Cam Barker and Corey Potter are both projects, with Barker having the ignominious task of proving his selection third overall in 2004 by Chicago wasn't one of the biggest bust moves in recent years (Alex Ovechkin and Evgeni Malkin were the only players taken ahead of him; Travis Zajac and Mike Green were other first-round notables). Theo Peckham is muscle and not much else, while Jeff Petry is a work in progress.

Now granted, the Oilers have some great teens in the pipeline — Oscar Klefbom, Martin Marincin and David Musil come to mind — but that's not the answer. You can get away with a kid line up front, but ask the Ottawa Senators how a blue-line with multiple youngsters fares against NHL competition.

This is where some forward thinking comes in: Edmonton's turnaround doesn't have to take long. This summer's mission should be to acquire at least two sturdy, veteran defencemen, even if a high draft pick must be parted with to get the job done. The axiom you can never have enough young talent only goes so far. The Oilers know they have scoring and jam up front for the next decade. But you can't win it all these days without defence (just ask the Washington Capitals of the recent past).

Whitney brings minutes and a lot of other qualities to the ice but he can't do it alone. And with a checked injury history, Edmonton can't afford to put all its defensive eggs in one basket.

Today's horoscope

♈ Aries March 21-April 20

Someone in a position of authority can threaten or bribe you, but you won't lose sight of your principles.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21 You would be wise to watch your back over the next 24 hours. According to the planets, a rival is plotting.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 You may not want to give up on a project but you have no choice. It would take cash to keep going.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 Deep down, you know what must be done but you seem to be waiting for a sign. Trust your gut instead.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 23

You may be tempted to hold out for a better offer but that may not be such a good idea. Seal the deal.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24-Sept. 22 If you believe things will go badly, they may. You'll feel better when the Sun changes signs this weekend.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 The best way to deal with someone who refuses to see sense is to let him or her go. He or she will learn.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 In a matter of days, you will confound your critics and do something extraordinary.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21

Give others the impression that you don't really care whether you win or lose — then strike.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20

Don't dwell on your failures. You can't change the past so why waste time thinking about it?

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18

Something seems to be bothering you deeply and your rivals have picked up on the scent of your fear.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20. Why are you trying to live up to an untimely image? Don't try to be someone else. SALLY BROMPTON
